

Graves to make way for town

More than 25,000 graves and 27,000 urns at the Kwong Teck Suan Teochew cemetery will be exhumed for the development of Nee Soon New Town.

The 32-hectore burial ground off the 18 km Sembawang Road belongs to the Ngee Ann Kongsi and is one of the largest Chinese cemeteries in Singapore.

A Housing Board spokesman said exhumation will be carried out in stages from early next year.

The cemetery, which is more than 50 years old, has been closed from new burials two years ago.

The HDB gave notice 11 days ago that its Resettlement Department will exhume the remains for cremation.

Descendants or next-of-kin have been asked to contact the Department within three months from the date of the notice for registration and arrangement for exhumation and cremation.

2 Our Department will carry out the exhumation of the graves claimed by you on 4.11.81. Please call at the cemetery on 4.11.81 at 8.30 a.m. to witness the exhumation. We shall meet you at the site office in the cemetery which is near to HDB Columbarium (see attached sketch).

3 With regard to your request for storage of the cremated remains at the Board's Columbarium at Nee Soon, you will have to obtain from us a piece of white marble plaque (30.5cm x 21.6cm) for inscription if you wish to have the name of the deceased inscribed. The marble plaque will be issued free-of-charge but you will have to arrange for inscription at your own expense. The marble plaque will be issued to you at the site office on the day of exhumation, as stated above, on production of this letter.
